

The Federation for Local History Studies and the Federation of Local History Societies have jointly arranged a Seminar on the emerging labour movements in Ireland in the period from the start of the 20th century until the immediate post Partition period c1923.

A number of eminent historians, journalists, trade unionists and history lecturers will provide some interesting and provocative insights to a troubled and formative period in the development of the labour and trade union movement in Ireland during a time of international conflict and national upheaval and there will be opportunities for comment and questions from the audience.

The talks cover both parts of the island and show how events were shaped often by unforeseen circumstances and bitter conflicts that threatened to undo all the progress that had been made in previous years.

The Seminar will be held in Grosvenor House, Glengall Street, Belfast on Saturday 16 April, from 10.00 am to 4.00 pm. Tea/coffee will be available on arrival and lunch will be provided.

The full programme is attached. The cost of the Seminar is £20.00 or €23.

Please complete the tear-off below and return with the appropriate fee to the address on at the bottom.
